Suggestion: Cogs should no longer be head admin.

by clydecash » 28 Jun 2011, 13:16

Honestly, if no one tackles this now, it's never going to get done.

My main reasoning is because if old members start shying away and new members are going to get rejected, then the community is going to die.

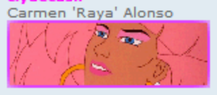

Mountain Man was going to leave. Cows left. John Dudebro contemplated it and maybe he's gone now. But I don't want this community to die.

This is why I wanted the new members to begin with because I figured if you brought your friends here you'd have more of a reason to stay and if new people joined old people would have more of a reason to stay. And new blood that isn't from #sonichu has the chance to be pretty good. We've had some good new members like lipton or Purdie.

Either you want cogs as head admin still or not. I'm not putting any suggestions for who should replace him. That will come at a later time if this is in general agreement.

I wanted this to be the last time.

If people want things to remain the same, they will. But if it happens again, then it's their fault.

Cogs is a detriment to the community by creating fear of posting.

Just my opinion, though.

I'm voting for no. Been out of the loop for a while due to illness, but if I were to leave this place it wouldn't be because someone with a tiny amount of power over a small internet community was a dick to me.

I probably shouldn't even vote, I dunno what's going on but even though cogs has pissed me off in the past they've never done anything game-breakingly stupid.

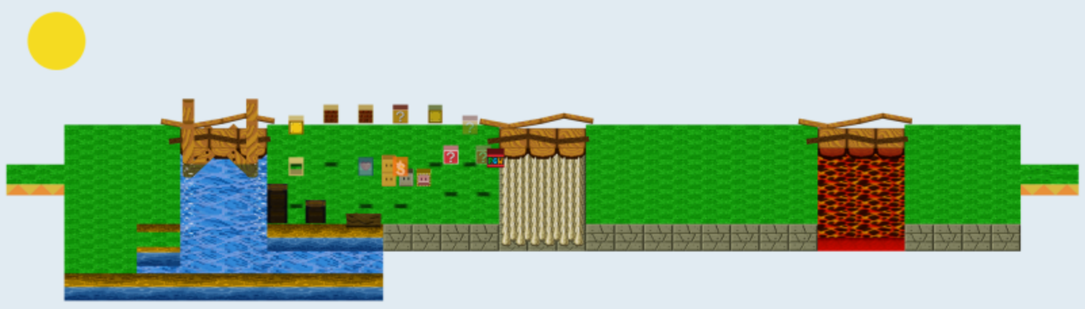

Well, maybe a couple things.

I don't think Cogs should step down as head admin by any means, but more people of their level would mean that they couldn't ride quite as rough-shod as sometimes they do. And yeah, my main bro Bluespike makes a good point, but if you're genuinely afraid of posting on the internet because someone might get mad at you and call you a faggot then are you really that small that you'd get hurt?

Iuno.

Fuck bitches get money.

I don't think the community is going to die over a fight.

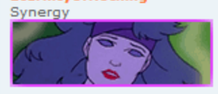

We got several people who will stick around, I am pretty sure of that.
All threads like this do is divide the community instead of saving it.

Personally, I had a bigger fear of posting when was running the show. She'd ban and dox you if you told her that you thought she screamed a little too hard during _____ phone call. I've never had a fear of posting around cogs. BUT, I'm just a lowly lurker, and really have no deep insight into this issue. I just wanted to comment that there have been worse people in power.

I think running it as a board would be better, have no central head admin, and have an odd number on the board, so people may decide democratically what should happen.

As Cogs is actually doing things with the site, along the lines of actually RUNNING it, i think they shouldn't step down, from administration at least as at least they are working on things. What should happen, as mentioned, is that there shouldn't be one person with ultimate power.

I think that this cycle of huge drama fests followed by quiet periods would be reduced significantly if there were maybe either a more laid back leader or a group of leaders.
Either way what we have now doesn't seem to be working too well since it was explained that these kinds of drama explosions weren't going to happen again, and did anyway.

You're making mountains our of molehills here.

This isn't even as good of a situation as last time to have this kind of discussion because while the decision might be irrational it's not as malicious. As much as I disagree with the choices Cogs made this is fucking silly.

Clyde, you're really quick to turn things into some big us or them situation. To faction up as many people as you can and try to make some drastic change. Last time you proselytized to Tinychat and made a copy of PVCC, this time you're using your #PVCC channel. I don't care for it, frankly.

The only good idea was the Dual Modship idea from before and if people care THAT much then that is the only solution that is fair and functional by my measure. I don't care what happens because I think that we've been doing fine since then and are still doing fine. This whole thing is blown way out of proportion. I'm willing to believe that the only reason that things have come to this is because some people have been holding on to salty feelings since the last round and this was just a convenient excuse to air them.

Perhaps everyone should just chill the fuck out?

Also, I'm not even suggesting that there should even be a new head admin. Things seemed to go just fine without Cogs interfering.

I keep suggesting having a couple of head admins, rather than one. I think this is the best solution.

I just don't get why everyone's getting arsey. If a person wants to be a cunt on the internet then there's no stopping them short of banning them. The trouble is that people get banned for less than cogs says to people on a regular basis.

Now I'm not one to complain, and I read a bit of general discussion and I can sorta see where this situation has arisen from.

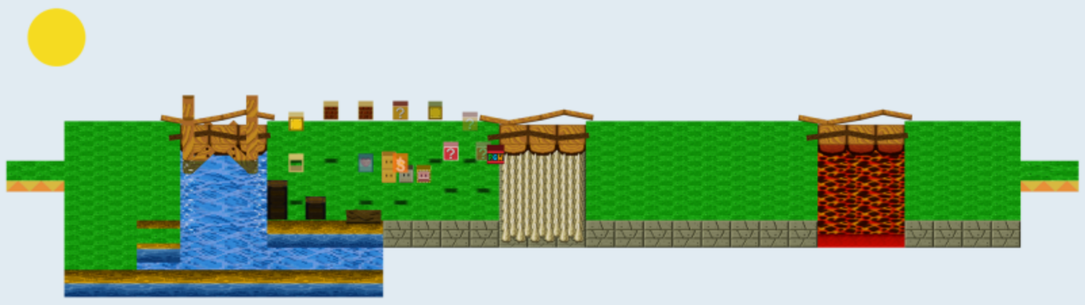

I guess what needs to stop isn't cogs, it's the double standards that has brought all of this about. If Crass or Blue can be banned for being arsey or obnoxious then cogs should be able to be for the same reason.

Fuck money get bitches.

EDIT: Of course it's Cogs' forum so there's literally nothing anyone can do about it. This poll, while well-intentioned and a decent signifier of the community's wishes is essentially pointless while Cogs owns the place.

Because it's not a cheerocrasy like in Bring It On.

Thing you're not keeping in mind even if the majority votes it:

"Hi Cogs we decided you aren't the head admin anymore"
"I own the site so yes I am actually"
"Oh"

And that's the end of that

I was under the impression that it already happened, after last time. Like we had that big voting thread where people said "one mod" "two mod" or "three mod" and then like two mod won, even though the vote was split between two sections or something?

What ever happened with that?

Not exactly. If the community wants something done, I'll do it because that's the community wants.

If the community wants it hard enough and wishes on a star.

and now my posts are slowly degrading into not taking this seriously

My ideal situation:

Get rid of cogs as admin, leave everything else the way it is because it was going just fine. Except Terry giving out the passwords publicly.

If people want to do that plan instead, that's fine.

But for now this is just about if cogs should retain her admin or not regardless of whatever else happens after.
